GUEAT as have been the improvements in Washington in recent years there are still too many old shantles on sites that should be occupied by handsome buildings. The buyer and builder should push their work well out on Seventh and Ninth streets. THE City of Philadelphia receives about day that Capt. Walker assumes command

$1,000,000 a year from water rents in excess of the ordinary expenses of the water department. If it were possible to get control of the sir used for respiration in that city two or three millions more might be made "in exress of the ordinary expenses" of the air department. Why not corner air as well as water?

In would be difficult to name any public man of any age or country whose character has stood the test of time better than that of Washington. His memory grows brighter and his great life stands out in stronger rollef with each recurring anniversary of bis birth. He is most honored be these whose indement is best informed.

It opposes that the lack of fands by reasee of which hundreds of workmen in the erdnance bureau at the Washington navy yard are now suspended is due to a clerical error. Congress made the required appropriation of $500,000 for the guns of the ships or lived by the forty-eighth Congress -the vessels that Secretary Whitney is expected to build-but it was left out of the tendire the work at the end of the session The fault lies with the victous habit of leaving all the important work of a session till "the last day in the afternoon.

THE great movement, originally suggested by Mr. Blaine, for a Congress of all American nations to be held at Washington for the purpose of deciding upon a distinctively American policy, will be revived by Senator Frye to-morrow. It was a grand conception, worthy of its distinguished author, and the lapse of years has only emphasized the general appreciation of its importance. But, as we have before inti-mated, such a scheme will find little favor with an administration that has proposed to surrender the Monroe doctrine in relation to the question of isthmian transit,

In a any one now doubt that aldermen who have run away, as well as some who are still here, were bribed !-- New York World.

Probably not. The general reputation of New York aldermen has, for many army and navy movement for reorganizayears, been so bad that they have not been suspected of a desire to miss a fair chance if selling their votes. In the popular be lief a prima facte case of bribery is always made out when a chance for a sale has been shown. This may be cruelly unjust, but it is true. The old rule is reversed in dealing with New York aldermen. They are are as sumed to be guilty and the burden of proof rests with the defense.

A CABLE letter to one of the Sunday syn dicates gives some luteresting gossip on the Dilke scandal. It appears that Sir Charles, seeing the ruinous effect of obstinate silence on his part, has at last attempted to rehabiltate his reputation in the public estimation. To this end he authorizes the statement that the reason he did not testify on the trial in denial of Mrs. Crawford's allegations of his immoralities was that he was prevented from doing so by advice of counsel. He lectures that he told his counsel he strongly desired to be heard under oath, and went o court expecting to be called to the stand and fully prepared to answer in detail off the charges against him. He claims to have letters and documents disproving Mrs. Crawford's statements. and showing that he had visited the Crawford massion only five times in two years. His own servants, he averwere waiting in the corridor of the court. ready to testify that Mrs. Crawford was not accustomed to call at his house in Sleane street. Sir Charles says he is unable to account for the attitude of his counsel, but that, as a matter of fact, Mr. Cham berlin and Bussell James concurred in advising him not to enter the witness box. They assured him that there was no necessity for his doing so, as the case against him had broken down and Mrs. Crawford's counsel would simply follow a peculiarly office-live line of cross-examination if he afforded them an opportunity. This explanation draws additional criticism upon Sir Charles. The Patt Matt Gazette declares that if he wishes to restore his reputation this that if no wishes to restore his reputation this statement will not suffice; that he should apply to the queen's proctor for a fresh their leaf of the case, on the ground of error and there would be some likelihood of convicting owing to a throat trouble.
